

New Yorkers Agree: NY Ticketing Law Protects Consumers and Should be Renewed

Poll finds overwhelming support for the renewal of New York's ticketing law;
New York consumers want ticket transferability to be preserved

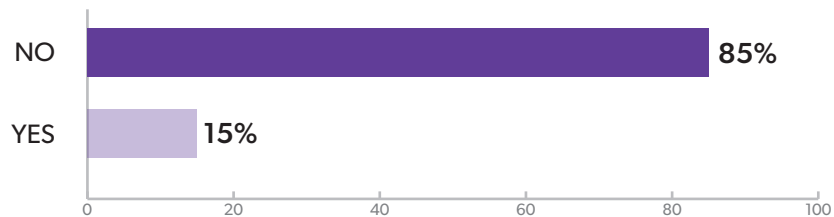

If you do not use your tickets to a concert or game, should you have the freedom & choice to do what you want with your tickets, like reselling them or giving them away?

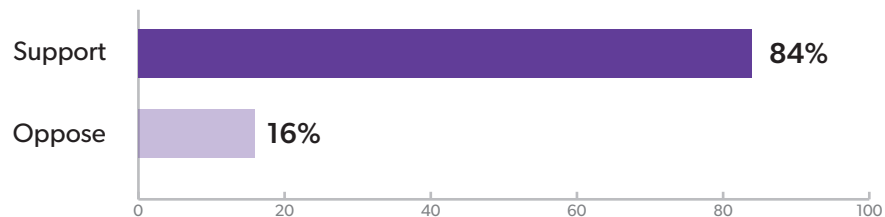

Is it fair or unfair for box offices, teams or Ticketmaster to prevent you from buying tickets from marketplaces like StubHub, Seat Geek and Vivid Seats?

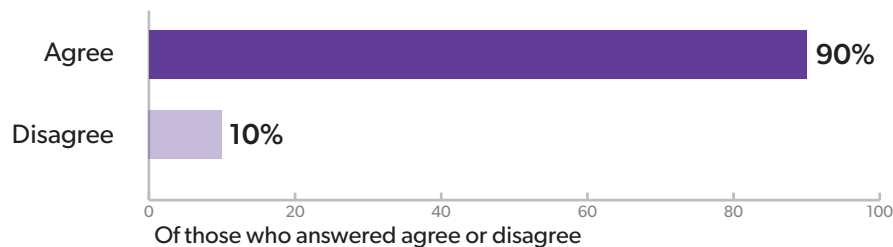

Should venues be able to deny your entry at the gate or cancel or invalidate your tickets because you bought tickets from a marketplace like StubHub, Seat Geek or Vivid Seats?

Current New York law guarantees your right to transfer, resell or give away your tickets however you choose. Do you support this law being renewal?

Do you agree or disagree? It is good that NY law requires sellers to offer you a transferable ticket, if for some reason you choose to give away or resell your tickets.

Methodology: 500 New York adults ages 18+ were surveyed by Google Surveys from April 16, 2021 through April 29, 2021.
